Monthly Commentary

Bond markets. The most important event in July and August was a sharp rise in Treasury yields. Despite the hype around the downgrade of the US credit rating by Fitch to AA+, we do not think it was the main reason for growth. There were more important factors. First, a continuous lack of dovish signs from the FED (Powell's Jackson Hole remarks signaled that another hike is probably likely, however the market does not believe in that opportunity). Second, still stable US economy - basically speaking the bet on US recession in 1H23 was perceived by most investors as a nearly 100% guaranteed deal. However, that bet did not work, and higher long-term yields reflected the repositioning for a higher growth economy. We think that both factors are still relevant. Moreover, it seems that the risk of re-acceleration of inflation due to higher oil prices seems not to be priced in the market at all. Breakevens are at 3-year lows, however the Core CPI stopped deceleration and rising Brent price may lead to higher gasoline prices in the US. That said we are not convinced that it is a proper moment to buy longer-duration Treasuries even though yields are near 2022 high of 4,2%.

Portfolio. We still prefer to keep a low portfolio duration (in the range of 2,0-3,0). In July and August, we made several tactical trades in 10Y US Treasuries, however, all of them were closed and major part of the portfolio is kept in short-duration 3–6-month Treasuries. We prefer to keep a conservative stance due to a combination of factors: 1) risk of a one more acceleration of inflation due to higher oil prices; 2) generally mediocre economic data (especially rising share of bad retail loans). Despite generally weak performance of Emerging Market bonds, we are comfortable with our top position in Brazil (low inflation, start of monetary easing, recent upgrade by Fitch to BB).
